Jeremy is the divisional operating officer of the business division and the director of the library and knowledge services.

He has a dual role in the firm. He is the divisional operating officer of the global business division, which consists of the firm's corporate, real estate, intellectual property and charities teams. In this role he helps set and implement the strategic direction and runs the operational aspects of the division, working closely with the finance, HR and marketing business service teams.

Jeremy also has responsibility for a library and knowledge services team who are responsible for the curation of the firm's intellectual property, subscriptions and legal research services; and a team of professional support lawyers who support the fee earners by providing legal research, training and the maintenance of the firm's precedents. The team won the Best Legal Information Service in the 2015 LexisNexis Library Awards.

Jeremy holds an MBA from Oxford University's Said Business School.
