Ed is an associate in the private client and tax team.

He advises on a broad range of tax, trust and succession matters, both domestic and international, for high net worth individuals, trustees and privately held companies.

Ed regularly advises individuals who are acquiring or losing UK tax residence on cross-border tax issues and lifetime planning. He has particular experience advising on the taxation of insurance bonds as well as employment tax matters, including employment-related securities.

He also provides tax advice on private equity investments and regularly works with other lawyers in the firm advising family offices. Recently he has been helping a number of clients understand and comply with their new obligations under the UK's new register of overseas entities which hold UK real estate.

Ed speaks French and Spanish.
